

Chief Executive Officer

Kijik Corporation • Anchorage, Alaska

Are you a corporate minded individual looking for an opportunity to build business lines for a budding Alaska Native Village Corporation? Can you demonstrate your experience in subsidiary development, start-ups or organic business growth? Do you have positive business relationships?

Consider joining the small, ambitious Kijik Corporation team of professionals who are ready to take the Corporation to the next level of success.

We are currently seeking a Chief Executive Officer (CEO) who understands and can facilitate business growth through government contracting, commercial industries, resource development, teaming agreements, mergers and/or acquisitions. The incoming CEO will have the lead role in business development, daily operations and project oversight. Kijik is relatively new to government contracting and currently focused on projects in the communications, IT, professional services and technical assistance fields. Kijik seeks to further its recent success, in these fields, through the recruitment of a dynamic individual with both the qualifications and proven leadership skills needed to achieve corporate growth.

Kijik Corporation was originally founded as the Nondalton Native Corporation in 1979 as part of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA). Under the terms of ANCSA, Kijik, meaning “a place where people gathered,” received title to the surface estate to over 126,000 acres of land around Lake Clark and Six Mile Lake, approximately 160 miles southwest of Anchorage. While the majority of the 126,000 acres remains undeveloped, it is our goal to manage this land to preserve and enhance our cultural and natural resources and to create economic opportunities for our shareholders.
